

Adjectives

Adjectives tell us more about the noun in sentences. Adjectives add interest to a noun by describing it. Without adjectives, sentences are boring.

Read the sentences in these boxes to see whether this is true. The sentences in the red boxes have no adjectives. The sentences in the green boxes have got adjectives.

Underline the adjectives in the green boxes below. The first adjective has been done for you.

One morning, Lerato woke up to some porridge that her grandmother had made for her.

One bright and beautiful morning, Lerato woke up to some sweet and buttery porridge that her smiling grandmother had made for her.

She then brushed her teeth with a toothbrush and toothpaste. She also washed her face with soap and a facecloth.

She then brushed her shiny teeth with a colourful toothbrush and strawberry toothpaste. She also washed her happy face with bubbling soap and a steamy facecloth.

After this, she put on her dress and shoes and went to a play date at her friend Kelly's house.

After this, she put on her flowery dress and princess shoes and went to a painting play date at her lovely friend Kelly's tree house.

Now it is your turn to make sentences interesting.

Write an adjective in each blank space below so that each sentence is fun to read

At Kelly's treehouse, Lerato painted a picture of a giraffe. Kelly painted a picture of a lion.

After painting, Kelly and Lerato had cake and juice.

Time in the treehouse went by quickly. Soon, it was time for Lerato to go home.

Lerato thanked her friend Kelly for a day and gave her a hug goodbye.
